“ Abuelita was a sweet beautiful person. She loved to listen to music. She owned about a billion cassette tapes. She loved to sew and cut up her clothes to "fix them". She loved to shop, she could shop for hours on end. She loved watching the news. She had to watch the 5 o clock news and rewatch the same news at 10pm. I always told her she should have been a news reporter. She taught me many things including how to speak Spanish. She believed so many superstitions and I had fun listening to them. I used to love hanging out in her room with her. She would tell me stories from when she was a little girl and how she was a trouble maker, how she met my grandpa, and many more. We used to watch novelas together for 3 hours straight, then talk about it after. I would miss her so much when she went to Mexico especially when something crazy would be happening in our novela and she always had the best reations/ comments. She loved to write and would read me her poems. She loved flowers and would fill up her room with so much decor until you couldn't see the walls. She was very over protective and strict when it came to her grand children. She loved us all and always told us. As kids she let us do what ever we wanted but as we got older she always lectured us when we would go out. She cooked the best food. I wish I would have payed attention and learned from her. She was very religious and taught me how to pray at night as a child. She had a prayer book that she would read the prayers from every day before she went to bed. She loved her ponds lotion and couldn't do without it. She loved whoppers and portillos and got excited when someone would bring her some. When we would go to six flags every year she loved renting the electric cart and driving around. She went every where with us. She loved to gossip and always had something to talk about. She said she didn't know English but we would always catch her speaking it when she needed to. I wish I could give her one more hug! Te quiero mucho Abuelita! Como te voy a extranar!
