“ Uncle Dan was one of the best persons I ever met. My first job was cleaning schools in the summer. One day Uncle Dan came to Jane Addams to inspect. He was dressed in a suit and took out a pair of white gloves. He ran his finger across an upper ledge in the hallway. When his finger came out dirty, he made us clean the entire wing of the school again. Another time I was in a car accident. When I tried to explain what happened to my parents, Uncle Dan chimed in and said that a spaceship had come down from space and took over my steering and crashed my car. I will miss him and his stories of the Russian turbo snowmobile he always said he was buying. Love Joe Zarlenga

Cuz. I just found out tonight. I always appreciated you being there for my Mom. When I saw you, you would say if I ever needed anything, I knew how to get a hold of you. I would have paid my respects if I knew! You were one of a kind.

To Larry Spino, agree with you, Danny was a true Melrose Parker! He never left the town! I did and so many times, I wish I hadn't! Your post was funny and RIP to our friend. Take care, cousin.

Sadly, another one of the true Melrose Parkers passed away. Danny was not only a Melrose Parker, but also a “1400 block of 22nd Ave. guy”! The list of characters raised on that block is amazing—all stand-up and loyal guys, and Danny was on the top of the list! Maybe it was the water—too much lead. (Ha-Ha).

There was a baseball team of 6,7,8 year olds with uniforms before Little League even started. And guess who the coach was? Yep! You guessed it: Danny. Of course he gave nick names to all the players such as “Baby Bunting Buddy”, and he called me “Power House”.

There are hundreds of stories I could tell you about Danny—here’s another one: We’re in Vegas with a group of guys. Danny is sitting at a black jack or poker table, and tells me to sit down. Then as Danny always does, he starts teasing the dealer. Well the dealer is stone faced and doesn’t like it. He threatens to call security on Danny. But instead Danny yells out “Security! Security!” Two security officers come, and within 5 minutes Danny has the officers, the pit boss, everyone at the table, including the dealer all laughing! Only Danny could do this!

*God bless Danny’s soul and his family.
Love, Larry Spino (another 22nd Ave guy)*
