“ Scott it's a shame you never told us of your cancer. I still think about and remember your voice when you were happy, mad or just acting goofy. We had are ups and downs but you know I was always there for you. I will always keep you close. I miss you dear brother and wish we could just talk again.

“ To my loving brother Scott. I will remember the good times growing up playing army and baseball and riding our bikes down the big hill on Kilbourn. My heart hurts for your silent pain and suffering. If only we could turn back time. Say hello to Dad and All our other relatives and friends. Until we meet again Dear Brother. ❤️🙏😞

To my dear husband Scott, I keep going over in my head the first time I saw you and the last time that I will see you, I find myself trying to catch my breath, a lot of people didn't know you after you got cancer and how you are truly hurting and suffering inside, there are times you always made the best of things for us and there were times that you would make things worse for us, but we did get over through a lot of things I don't know why you feel like there is always other ways out, you know you could always really talk to me or maybe I really wasn't listening, but now I won't make sure listen I know I will miss your voice and your eyes and the way you played with the grandchildren and I truly know that you loved your daughter, love you and always forever

“ My cool Uncle Dude. I'll never forget seeing you eat a cicada in my parents backyard, or our sleepover in Romeoville watching the Indian in the Cupboard movie and your cat that looked like Garfield sleeping on my head. Thank you for all the fun memories and times we had, they will never be forgotten. I miss you and love you everyday.
Love, Goo
